

This is a very, very bad idea. Any time spent listening to the radio will tell you that allowing consolidation of radio stations was a mistake, and allowing the same kind of things to happen in TV broadcasting will be just as bad if not worse. It is anti-competitive and anti free market.

I cannot think of a more damaging action to take than the proposed rule changes. The mere possibility that my access to news and information might be filtered through the desires of one corporation fills me with dread.

I glimpse of the future may be found in how little this is being mentioned on network news broadcasts. Clearly the less people know about the issue the better it is for them.

I am forced to ask myself:
Whose interests does the FCC really serve? The public's or it's corporate masters?

More diversity is always better than less.
